Celebrating the 20th anniversary of Poland's membership in the OECD, the influential biannual OECD Report: Economic Survey of Poland 2016 was presented in March 2016. The presentation of the report was accompanied by an expert discussion on the OECD and its role in enhancing socio-economic growth and development in its member states and in particular its role in defining the path of transition and transformation in Poland.

During the panel discussion, the multifaceted nature of Poland's membership in the OECD was highlighted. In this context, the processes of socialization, peer pressure and evolving dynamics of cooperation at the OECD forum were emphasized. The panelists stressed that membership in the OECD was one of the most important steps on the path towards external liberalization and institutionalization of Poland's external relations. In this sense, membership in the OECD proved decisive in defining the path of the processes of transition and transformation in Poland. Moreover, as the panelists pointed out, serving as a unique forum of dialogue, expertise transfer and best practice sharing, the OECD offered Poland the opportunity to gradually turn from a rule taker to a rule maker in contemporary regulatory processes thus increasing Poland's international clout.
